awarded a prestigious honor that has been awarded to just 10 other current or former fire chiefs in the nation.

Souba, who has served as the chief of the North Star Fire Department for 33 years, was named City Fire Service Chief of the Year by the National Association of Fire Chief's and was presented with his award Monday night by Sen. John D'Amico (R-19th Ward). "North Star is proud of Chief Souba's accomplishments, which include: development of an onsite training program, role modeling, community outreach, and promotion of fire safety,” City Manager David Moore said in a press release.

Souba, who spoke at the event with the flu, thanked the Association for recognizing his hard work.

“It’s an extremely prestigious award,” he said. “To be selected as City Fire Service Chief of the Year is a testament to our ability to make a positive impact on the community.” A Belgian public health institute has published a study which says cell phones cause a damaging build up of certain chemicals in the body. The institution, the Agency for Public Health and the Environment, conducted an experiment where participants in the study were put into a brain-scan machine called an fMRI. This causes the brain to emit electrical signals that give off an image of the brain, and this image of the brain is compared with what the brain normally does. This tells scientists what changes in the brain are caused by the chemicals.

Afterwards, the participants' phones were used to speak for four minutes, causing the chemicals to build up in their brains. When the phones were later returned to the participants, they showed signs of stress in the form of increased activity in parts of the brain connected to the stress response. Although previous studies have already suggested that radiation from phones causes some subtle brain changes, this study is said to have a more positive outcome. In addition, it also showed increases in the levels of stress-related brain chemicals known as corticotrophin-releasing hormone in the participants' brains. The agency said that the results show that cell phones can cause a direct biological effect, as the
